

Using Adverbs to Express Time, Place and Cause

You and your fellow adventurers are preparing to raid a dungeon for treasure. The dungeon is guarded by a foul beast. Are you and your adventurers warriors? Wizards? Dwarves? Elves? What could the foul beast be? Are you successful in your raid?

Write about your raid. In your sentences, you must include adverbs to express time, place and cause. Your sentences should include at least 2 of each kind of adverb, for a minimum of 6 sentences.

Some example adverbs:

Time	Place	Cause
later	below	therefore
immediately	above	as a result
eventually	inside	consequently
tomorrow	outside	furthermore
now	closer	nevertheless

This image shows a blank sheet of white paper with horizontal ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the paper.

Using Adverbs to Express Time, Place and Cause

You and your fellow adventurers are preparing to raid a dungeon for treasure. The dungeon is guarded by a foul beast. Are you and your adventurers warriors? Wizards? Dwarves? Elves? What could the foul beast be? Are you successful in your raid?

Write about your raid. In your sentences, you must include adverbs to express time, place and cause. Your sentences should include at least 2 of each kind of adverb, for a minimum of 6 sentences. Where possible, remember to include noun phrases to make your writing more descriptive.

Some example adverbs:

Time	Place	Cause
later	below	therefore
immediately	above	as a result
eventually	inside	consequently
tomorrow	outside	furthermore
now	closer	nevertheless

"We must make our charge at daybreak," Hroth the dwarf insisted. "It will be when Skrex the dragon is at his most vulnerable." The other mages nodded in agreement. Our plan was to share the gold that the dragon had been hoarding around the village and better the lives of everyone. Therefore, it was essential that our plan worked. In the dark of night, we gathered and waited at the entrance to the dragon's dungeon. At dawn, we would go inside.

As we went deeper and deeper into the dungeon, we heard the sound of snoring ahead. Eventually, we saw Skrex sleeping heavily on his mountainous piles of gold and precious jewels. The other mages and I attempted to cast a levitation spell, lifting the sleeping, ferocious beast into the air. Hroth stood silently with his axe drawn, should the beast awake. The sleeping beast hovered in the air undisturbed. As a result, we began stuffing our pockets with gold and jewels. Once full, all we had to do was lower Skrex back onto the golden mountain and he would be none the wiser. His scaly, green tail flopped onto the gold, sending gold scattering everywhere. Skrex's searing yellow eyes shot open! "Run!" wailed Hroth.

I managed to return to the village but Hroth and the others weren't so lucky. Nevertheless, I returned with just enough to last us for another year.